International Lead & Zinc
Study Group

International Nickel
Study Group

Information on the By-Product Metals of Copper, Lead, Zinc and Nickel

- The three Study Groups are now offering individual reports on the by-product metals of copper, zinc, lead and nickel. Information is available on bismuth, germanium, indium, cobalt, platinum group metals, scandium, molybdenum, rhenium, selenium, tellurium and rare earth elements.
- A separate publication for each by-product metal provides information on the production, usage, trade and the market outlook. Detailed information is provided on common sources of by-product metals, refinery processes, recycling, markets, contracts, historic prices and pricing mechanisms, uses, government regulations, REACH status of compounds, government stockpiles and trade restrictions.
- Information is provided up to 2012 and forecasts for 2012-2015 are included. Data on expansion plans and forecasts are also included.
- As part of each publication, a Directory is included providing a listing of mining and producing companies and production capacity for the metals as well as announced new projects.
- The information in these publications was originally contained in the 2012 Study of By-Products of Copper, Lead, Zinc and Nickel. The work was carried out by Oakdene Hollins of the UK on behalf of the Study Groups.
